Angela Bitondo	What is gender-based violence? It is the type of abuse that women, girls, and Two-Spirit, trans and non-binary people are at highest risk of experiencing. It can take physical and emotional forms, such as: name-calling, hitting, pushing, blocking, stalking/criminal harassment, rape, sexual assault, control, and manipulation. Many forms of this abuse are against the law, yet go unreported. It can happen between people in romantic relationships. It can happen in families, at work, and between friends, acquaintances and strangers. It often occurs in private places between people who know each other. Anybody can be abused, no matter their background, identity, or circumstance. But women, girls, and gender-diverse people are at high risk of gender-based violence. Some are at even higher risks, due to the additional discrimination and barriers they face. This includes women with disabilities, Indigenous women, racialized women, trans and non-binary people, and women who are homeless or underhoused.
